I am pleased to submit the Annual Report for the Chinese Medicine Council of New South Wales (Council) for 1 July 2016 to 30 June 2017.

The number of complaints about Chinese medicine practitioners in New South Wales remained fairly consistent with last year’s figures. A summary of the cases managed by the Council during 2016-17 is included in this Annual Report.

The Council takes a proactive approach to public safety. Following a complaint relating to accidental traumatic pneumothorax following acupuncture, the Council developed a digital educational package for practitioners. The material outlined patient risk factors, the clinical features of a pneumothorax as well as the management of traumatic pneumothorax including first aid.

The Council also received the draft report arising from a research study that the Council had commissioned to research the perceptions and beliefs that NSW Chinese medicine practitioners hold regarding professional regulation and the role of the Council in the National Registration and Accreditation Scheme. The Council will use the information captured by this research in the coming year as the basis for developing educational material for NSW registered Chinese medicine practitioners.

Council members were also active in promoting the Council’s activities and raising its profile at several professional conferences and educational events during the year.

The Council has continued to manage its budget effectively, which will result in another slight decrease in the annual registration fees for NSW Chinese medicine practitioners in 2018.

The Council looks forward to improving its public and professional profile and working with its co-regulatory partner, the Health Care Complaints Commission, as well as with the National Board and the Australian Health Practitioner Regulation Agency.

My role as President of the Council has been aided immeasurably by the assistance I have received from my fellow Council members, the executive and corporate services provided by the Health Professional Councils Authority (HPCA) and by the Council’s Executive Officer and Assistant Executive Officer.

Council Communications
The Chinese Medicine Council website is the Council's primary communications tool to engage with Chinese medicine practitioners and the wider community. The Council's website is being redeveloped and updated and is expected to provide a modern, more interactive and user-friendly platform for the public, practitioners and other visitors.

The website redevelopment involved stakeholder and community consultation that included workshops, focus groups and user testing. The new website will include easy access to the Council’s new online complaint form, with detailed information about the complaint process and will make it easier for visitors to access information about the Council, including policies and publications.

The new website is expected to be launched in August 2017.

Overseas Travel
The Chinese Medicine Council did not incur any overseas travel costs during the year.
Other Council Activities

Complaints about two Chinese medicine practices in NSW led the Chinese Medicine Council to assess the practitioners for compliance against relevant standards and guidelines. Deviations from the standards were identified including:

- inadequate clinical records
- inadequate infection control procedures
- poor sanitation
- poorly labelled Chinese herbs.

The Chinese Medicine Council took action and engaged authorised persons to assist with monitoring including conducting infection control inspections and audits of clinical records.

Remuneration

Council members received the following remuneration.

Council members also receive sitting fees for conducting Council Inquiries, attending committee meetings and undertaking other regulatory activities if these are on a day other than the regular Council meeting.

Council members are reimbursed for expenses when travelling on official business at Council direction.

Panel and Tribunal members receive remuneration and reimbursement of expenses related to Council business.

Education and Research Account

The Chinese Medicine Council maintains an Education and Research account to fund activities that assist better understanding of conduct, performance and health issues amongst practitioners and students and management of these issues.

The Council continued to fund its commissioned research project being undertaken by the Australian Research Centre in Complementary and Integrative Medicine (ARCCIM), at the University of Technology Sydney. The Council expended a total of $9,091 in payments from the Education and Research account this year in accordance with agreed milestones.
Financial Management
